Ministers Ask Council to Stop Sale of all But Milk, Drugs and Newspapers on Sunday, As Forecasted by The Age Yesterday ---Council's Session

The Sunday closing ordinance, or "an ordinance prohibiting business and labor on Sunday" as designated by the ministers, was the most vital question presented to the city council for consideration at the first meeting of the new year Tuesday evening all being present except Mr. Lawrence. Toward the close of the session, Rev. Robertson, who had been a silent guest up until this time, asked permission from President Stacey to address council and briefly stated that he, as chairman of a committee of which Rev. Weber and Rev. Kohler are the other members, appointed by the Ministerial association, wished to request council to take up an ordinance prohibiting the sale of merchandise in general on Sunday. He said the matter came up about a month ago at a meeting at which a number of business men were present. The ordinance had been drawn up by an attorney, Rev. Robertson said, as a favor to him, and without compensation. He handed each member of council, the clerk and the newspaper men with a type-written copy.

Size of the New Lid.
It provides that any person over fourteen years of age who engages in common labor or requires any person under his control to labor on Sunday, and whoever shall open or cause to be opened any building or place for the transaction of business or shall sell anything of value on Sunday shall be guilty of a misdemeanor and on complaint made within ten days thereafter and upon conviction thereof be fined not more than $25 for the first offense, and for each subsequent offense not less than $5 nor more than $100 or imprisoned not less than five days nor more than thirty. But the ordinance does not apply to works of necessity or charity and does not extend to persons who conscientiously observe the seventh day of the week as the Sabbath and who do in fact abstain on that day from doing the things prohibited by the ordinance; nor shall it be so construed as to prevent the sale of milk at any time; or the opening of drug stores for the sale of drugs and medicines only; or the sale of newspapers, magazines and periodicals between the hours of 5 o'clock and 10:30 a. m. and 12 m. and 1 o'clock p. m.; or the serving and sale of meals and lunches only, at hotels, boarding houses and restaurants (this however is not however to be construed as permitting the general serving of ice cream, soda water, and other soft drinks, but allows only bona fide lunches and meals) or to prevent livermen from attending to and hiring out horses and vehicles.

Not Too Sweeping
Rev. Robertson said he had had occasion to go over this question a number of times before in larger and smaller cities. He said that the ministers were agreed upon the exceptions noted in the ordinance and also that an ordinance could not be enforced unless it meets with the approval of the common sense of the great body of people.

"Yesterday" said he "I attempted to see all the druggists. They are anxious to have less hours than at present."

He said that as to newspapers the desire was to have the sale of them stopped during church hours. The ministers do not recommend the sale of papers at all but know they must not try to do anything beyond their power.

He said there was originally another exception, providing that meat could be sold on Sunday during the summer months but that meat men had told him there is no need of keeping open at all on Sunday but those he talked with already close on Sunday. One said he agreed to replace on Monday any meat purchased Saturday night which spoiled over Sunday.

Rev. Weber also addressed a few remarks to council, saying that the report had reached the ministers that a statement had been made that "if the ministers would do their part the Sunday closing would be an easy thing." He said they felt that it had been thrown upon them and that they should present the matter to council, leaving it to council's good sense and judgment.

Aimed Specifically?
Rev. Robertson gave an inkling of the real object of the ordinance when he said that there are a great many persons who come here from other lands, become naturalized and settle down to the enjoyment of American life but the native born citizens prefer to observe a day of rest. Yet there are perhaps a dozen places where a general merchandise business is conducted all day Sunday. Newark has a Sunday ordinance which is much more sweeping and general, it was stated.

Solicitor Williams acceded to council's request to take up the ordinance with the committee. Mr. Wisenbush seconded the motion of Dr. St. Clair to refer it to the solicitor and committee on rules and ordinances and all voted aye. The committee will meet with Solicitor Williams one week from tomorrow night or Thursday, Jan. 17.

Obscene Pictures
Along the same line Dr. St. Clair addressed the chairman and chief of police saying that he had talked to a traveling man who said he had traveled north and south, east and west and hadn't seen as obscene moving picture machines as in the saloons of Coshocton. Chief Maple replied "that may be. I don't know a thing about it. They're not on the walls are they? I don't know of any machines except machines to play music. I haven't ever in a saloon unless there is trouble. I will investigate though I suppose we have an ordinance covering it. We have an ordinance covering the sale of obscene pictures."

Change a Light.
The report of the committee on the removal of the light on Walnut street from the west to the east side of the Novelty-Adv. Co. was called for but no report was made. Dr. St. Clair said he saw no objection to moving the light if there is no money to put up a new one.

A bill of $60 from Auditor Smith for special assessment and general tax on the Sent property sold to the city was presented and ordered paid.

New Officials.
Mayor Smith submitted the name of Dr. D. E. Cone as member of the board of health and the name of C. D. Brooke as member of the board of sinking fund trustees for the approval and confirmation of council, vacancies having occurred on January 1, 1927. Upon motion of Dr. St. Clair the appointments were confirmed. Dr. Cone's term is for five years and Mr. Brooke's is for four years.

Dr. Stacey spoke of the bad condition of the Chestnut street crossing over the Wheeling tracks and said people were driving along the railroad. Mr. Wisenbush said it was up to the board of public service.

Chestnut Paving.
Mr. Robertson said he had been requested by residents of Chestnut street to bring the matter of the wretched condition of the paving before the council. Solicitor Williams said F. E. Pomerene was unable to be present at the council meeting having been called from the city and asked that council defer action until they met with him Thursday or Friday evening. Dr. St. Clair didn't see the use of this as council couldn't make the asphalt people come here to do the work any more than the gas company can. Mr. Robertson suggests council take up the matter directly with the Asphalt company.

Finally a motion carried that the street committee, composed of Pharon, St. Clair and Temple, meet with Mr. Pomerene at his office Friday night. Manager Smith of the Gas company was present. He said he talked to the manager of the Barber Asphalt company Tuesday afternoon and he suggested that it be put off till spring as they could not guarantee the work while the weather is so bad.

"You might profit by this experience" said the mayor.

"Last year they came promptly" replied Mr. Smith.

THE THAW CASE LIKE THE BORDENKIRCHER

Lines of Similarity Between Coshocton's And New York's Sensations

There are some points of resemblance between Ida May Bordenkircher's case and the case of Harry K. Thaw, charged with the murder of Stanford White at New York last July.

To be sure, the settings of the two tragedies were entirely different. Levi Bordenkircher came to his death as the result of a drunken carousal at his home on Christmas day while Stanford White was shot in the midst of a summer night's pleasures on the Madison Square roof garden. The two men who were murdered as well as the persons charged with the murders moved in entirely different social circles and yet when all the excitement has cleared away and the two cases come to be considered by the attorneys and judges and passes under the close scrutiny of the law's searching gaze there are many points in common as will be seen when the case comes to trial.

In the New York murder case, it is said that the prosecution will hold its trump cards until the last, that is, only sufficient evidence will be introduced at the opening of the case to establish the fact that Stanford White was shot on a certain night, that Harry Thaw did the shooting and that it was done intentionally and with premeditation. COSHOCOTON MEN TO AGAIN LEAD OHIO MINE WORKERS

Pres. Green Gives Valuable Suggestions in His Annual Address---The Convention

MINERS' OFFICIALS ELECTED
William Green, Coshocton, president.
D. H. Sullivan, Coshocton, vice president.
G. W. Savage, Columbus, secretary-treasurer.
William Morgan, Massillon, national executive board member.
Auditors—Lot Jenkins, Sherrods-ville; Thomas Crawford, Pleasant City; Conrad Wein, Murray City.

The annual meeting of District No. 6 United Mine Workers of America, convened in Odd Fellows hall Columbus Tuesday with about 120 delegates in attendance, practically all of whom will leave for Indianapolis at the close of the session to represent their locals in the national convention which convenes next week says the Columbus Dispatch.

The Ohio miners are in splendid financial condition with cash on hand of $118,742.55 and a membership in good standing numbering 30,000.

President's Address
President William Green in his annual address, made an exhaustive report of the great struggle that accompanied the general suspension in the jurisdiction of the United Mine Workers of America in the early part of 1926 and especially the Ohio, or District No. 6 portion of the contest. The report showed care and thoughtfulness in its preparation. The address covers 17 typewritten pages and practically all of it was published during the long strike. The report will be valuable as an historical review of the great contest between the miners and operators, with the coal diggers losing no glory in the great battle between capital and labor.

The president recommends a continuance of the defense fund of the organization and that each individual establish a personal fund for such contingencies.

Mr. Green called attention to the practically perfect constitution that has been built up by the past conventions and states that instead of attempting to make a revision of the document that the members try a season of living up to its provisions.

Loyalty to Law.
In the matter of distributing the strike funds there was some dissatisfaction among the member on the plan adopted of paying in merchandise other than liquor, the men feeling that they ought to have cash. On this point Mr. Green said: "Remember, that if a policy is adopted by a majority, objectionable as it may be, it is our duty as loyal union men to subordinate our individual sentiments and submit to the majority plan." The plan carried by 100 to 10.

Pollock Condemned
Senator Pollock was condemned for perjury in his treatment of mine legislation and efforts are promised by the president for further work to get proper laws for the safety of miners.

In mining as other industries, evolution is going on, and the report says:

Pick-Mined Coal.
"In 1901, the percentage of pick-mined coal in Ohio, was 32.7 per cent. and the percentage of machine-mined coal 67.3 per cent. In 1905, the percentage of pick-mined coal was 26 per cent. and the percentage of machine-mined coal was 74 per cent."

Many times has our attention been directed to the constantly decreasing production of pick-mined coal and the corresponding increase in machine-mined coal.

"These figures conclusively show that the price paid for the two different methods of mining is not relative or equitable, and fully warrants our continued efforts to secure a fair and fixed differential as between pick and machine mining."

Auditor's Report Read.
Secretary Treasurer G. W. Savage was highly complimented by the auditing committee for the manner in which he kept his books and accounts.

The report of Mr. Savage dealt with the financial aspect of the 1926 strike, and was quite severe on those members who do not attend the meetings of the locals regularly and get acquainted with the laws governing the body.

This lack of information leads to a lot of trouble and harsh criticism of the officers carrying out the mandates of convention and executive boards, and cause not only contentment in the ranks but entails great expense as a result of the delays caused by the misunderstandings and recommends legislation requiring the members' presence at the meetings.

A distinction should be made in the laws governing local and general strikes, the report suggested, stating that the district could take care of local contests with its present defense fund, but not general suspension without greatly taxing the members.

A yearly instead of a half-yearly term is recommended for local officers, as six months, the secretary says, is too short to get acquainted with the duties of the offices.

The following is the financial statement.

tion from W. B. Wilson, $150,000.00; interest for year 1926, $2147.33; transferred from treasury, 1926, $70. Total receipts, $406,495.39.

Expenditures— Strike benefits, $260,433.89; officers' salaries and expenses, $15,275.30; phones and telegrams $629.95; printing, $1240.60; postage and express, $465.96; to W. B. Wilson, $0.15 levy, $22,434.42; June, 1926 paid to delegates for transportation and hotels, $742.75; Morris Coal Co., $189.54; to W. B. Wilson, $0.50 assessment, $40,000.00; donation to subdistricts and money refunded to local unions, $1256; to T. S. Brooks, expenses joint convention at Athens, Ohio, $91.80; total expenses, $347,751.94; cash on hand, December 31, 1926, $118,742.55.

Vice President's Report.
The principal recommendation in Vice President D. H. Sullivan's address is for better protection in the mines against the dangers incident to the installation of electricity in the operation of the machines, which are rapidly taking the place of hand power. Deaths and maiming of miners are becoming alarming and not withstanding the honest efforts of the state mining department, are not satisfactorily lessened, and will not be until the laws governing the miners are brought up to the conditions that have come with the change in methods of mining.

Dr. Cone, board of health; C. D. Brooke, sinking fund trustees, new appointments.

Miscreants Tried To Blow up Plant of King Powder Co.,
Miss Garnet Wood, daughter of J. N. Wood of this city, together with hundreds of other employees of the King Powder Co. at King's Mills, near Cincinnati, had a narrow escape from death Monday.
Small explosions a couple of days ago had placed the company on guard, and the sheriff and two deputies disguised as workmen, went into the plant Monday.
They caught three employees placing primers about 12 tons of powder which, had it gone off, would have wrecked the great property and killed scores of people.
One of the men has confessed, three were disgruntled because who had been a shorter time in company's employ, had given worth and been promoted over.
Miss Wood is the official stenographer to President Wood.

Kissner Gets Dam Contract

The contract for building the dam in the Walhonding river six miles northwest of Coshocton was awarded to John N. Kissner, of West Lafayette, by the state board of public works Wednesday morning at Columbus. He will commence work about April 1.

It means the final realization of the hope to harness the water power of the river by means of turbines and concentrate the vast energy into electric power to turn the wheels of Coshocton's factories.

It is one of the most important steps in Coshocton's industrial progress in recent years.

The contract includes the building of the dam and the construction of the powerhouse and the transmission lines.

W. A. Kissner, who has been working on the dam since the water right was secured from the state, said the work will be completed by July 21.

was about $22,000. There were a half dozen other bidders including Mr. Biode, of Newcomerstown. Mr. Kissner is in the east just now but will arrive home in a day or two and go to Columbus to formally sign the contract. All the members of the board voted aye and all the terms of the contract have been agreed upon.

Mr. Kissner was awarded the contract last summer for dredging the canal and the dredge which he is having made at Marion will be completed by the middle of this month. He will commence the dredging work as soon as possible and will begin work on the dam as soon as the weather will permit. The contract specifies that the work shall be completed by July 21.

Financial Statement.
Summary for 1926—Cash on hand December 31, 1926, $128,344.42; tax received in 1926, $10,227.00; pay received in 1926, $10,227.00; total, $148,800.42.

The Sunday closing ordinance, prohibiting the sale of cigars and tobacco on Sunday, hits the druggists and they say that if it is passed they will close altogether on Sunday as they could not afford to keep open for the accommodation of the public for the small amount they realize from the sale of drugs. One drug store does not open on Sunday now and if the new ordinance is passed it will probably mean that all will be closed.

THIRTY KILLED, EIGHTY HURT

Mexican Troops Fire a Volley Into a Crowd of Strikers.

MEN ENGAGED IN RIOTING

Government Compelled to Use Force to Restore Order in the Orizaba Mill District—Jails and Armories Filled With Imprisoned Strikers—Details of a Bloody Affray.

City of Mexico, Jan. 9.—Reports received from Rio Blanco and Nogales, in the Orizaba mill district, indicate that the government has completely mastered the situation. The strikers have ceased all acts of violence in the presence of the large body of troops rushed there from this capital and nearby garrisons. The seriousness of the affair, however, was realized when it was made known that 30 of the workmen were killed outright and over 80 wounded by the soldiers, who were compelled to fire on the main body of the rioters before they could be dispersed.

It was learned that the men, after pillaging the company store at the Rio Blanco mills, became emboldened by their success. A part of the men rushed to Nogales, a short distance away, where another mill is located. Telegraph, telephone and electric light wires were cut and pawnshops and private houses were pillaged. Then the jails were thrown open and the prisoners set free. Residents of the mill region fled in terror to Orizaba. When the strikers reached Nogales one mill official and scoundrel from Orizaba made an ineffectual attempt to check them. A striker named Morales threw a huge stone at Senor Herrera, mayor of the city of Orizaba, striking that official on the head and badly wounding him. Herrera arose from where he had fallen and shot Morales, killing him instantly. A body of troops arrived and as the strikers attempted to resist, a volley was fired into the mob, killing 30 and wounding over 80. After this the mob was scattered, the strikers gathering together in groups at various points.

A body of 700 collected on a railroad track and held the train for the city of Vera Cruz for several hours, the engineers not daring to run through the crowd. Finally troops arrived and charged the men with broadswords, scattering them. The jails and armories are filled with imprisoned strikers. The government has learned that a committee of strikers has left Orizaba for Tlaxcala, Huehula and other cities to incite laborers at those points to strike.

BALLOT BOXES

Reported Missing in Manhattan by the Attorney General.

New York, Jan. 9.—Attorney General William S. Jackson has not been able to locate all the ballot boxes entrusted to his possession by a supreme court order, and intimated that he might be obliged to bring contempt proceedings against the board of elections. Certain boxes containing ballots cast in Manhattan were stored under the direction of the board, and a search failed to reveal their whereabouts. According to the attorney general, Commissioner Doelling, upon being served with the court order, refused to surrender these particular boxes or make known their location. To prevent, he says, possible tampering with the ballots cast in the Hearst-McClellan mayoralty election, which may be needed for a recount under the action begun by the state to oust Mayor McClellan and seat Wil-

After some delays the greater number of boxes were located, newly sealed and placed under guard of officers representing the attorney general.

Great Northern Case.

St. Paul, Jan. 9.—The legal battle started by the state of Minnesota to determine the necessity for the issue of the proposed $500,000,000 worth of Great Northern railroad stock began in the Ramsey county district court, before Judge Hallam. The state claims that the Great Northern railroad in promoting this issue of stock failed to take into consideration a state law which provides that due application shall first be made for a hearing before the state railroad and warehouse commission as to the necessity for the issue and for what purpose the money is to be expended before such an issue can be made.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have saved sufferers from stomach disorders millions of dollars by giving them, in one small 50 cent package, more relief than countless treatments by physicians would bring about at $2.00 per visit.

Perhaps you are afflicted with dyspepsia—or some kindred disease arising from a disordered digestion. It may be headaches, heartburn, palpitation, liver trouble, insomnia, nervous debility. They all have their beginning in a stomach which does not secrete the juices or grind the food which is taken into it.

If so, we urge you to send for a free trial package of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. It will cost you nothing and surely will bring you no gain unless you find, after using it, that you are benefited and feel that you need a full-sized package.

Most all articles in the grocery line are much higher. This advance came after many had placed orders but not all.

Lucky indeed are the customers of a grocer who had placed future orders as they will get high grade goods at last year's prices, while others must either pay more or get inferior qualities. Especially is this true of Canned Peas and Tomatoes. The Central Grocery Co. have the largest stock of canned Vegetables brought to Coshocton by a retail grocer; and our early purchases will enable us to sell to the trade at a value that is now a wholesale price. Apex Peas 10c or 3 for 25c. A full extra standard Tomato only 10c, good values, this would be 2 for 25c. All the higher grades as well. Our Coffee business increases daily, the reason: We sell only fresh roasted goods; all stunning values 16c, 20c, 25c, 30c and 35c; 4 different grades 20c, but "Central Special" is the leading 20c Coffee of the city. THE Masquerader

Author of "The Circle," Etc.

Again Loder was silent; then he smiled. "You have an oddly correct perception at times," he said. "I suppose I have had a little sort of pride in keeping my name clean, but pride like that is out of fashion, and I've got to float with the tide." He laughed a short laugh that Chilcote had heard once or twice before, and, crossing the room, he stood beside his visitor.

"After all," he said, "what business have I with pride, straight or lame? Have my identity, if you want it. When all defenses have been broken down one barrier won't save the town." Laughing again, he laid his hand on the other's arm. "Come," he said, "give your orders. I capitulate."

An hour later the two men passed from Loder's bedroom, where the final arrangements had been completed, back into the sitting room. Loder came first in faultless evening dress. His hair was carefully brushed, the clothes he wore fitted him perfectly.

To any glance, critical or casual, he was the man who had mounted the stairs and entered the rooms earlier in the evening. Chilcote's manner of walking and poise of the head seemed to have descended upon him with Chilcote's clothes. He came into the room hastily and passed to the desk.

"I have no private papers," he said, "so I have nothing to look up. Everything can stand as it is. A woman named Robins comes in the mornings to clean up and light the fire; otherwise you must shift for yourself. Nobody will disturb you. Quiet, dead quiet, is about the one thing you can count on."

Chilcote, half halting in the doorway, made an attempt to laugh. Of the two he was noticeably the more embarrassed. In Loder's well worn, well brushed tweed suit he felt stranded on his own personality, bereft for the moment of the familiar accessories that helped to cloak deficiencies and keep the wheel of conventionality comfortably rolling. He stood unpleasantly conscious of himself, unable to shape his sensations even in thought.

He glanced at the fire, at the table, finally at the chair on which he had thrown his overcoat before entering the bedroom. At the sight of the coat his gaze brightened, the aimlessness forsook him, and he gave an exclamation of relief.

"By Jove!" he said. "I clean forgot."

"What?" Loder looked round.

"The rings." He crossed to the coat and thrust his hand into the pocket. "The duplicates arrived only this afternoon—the nick of time, eh?" He spoke fast, his fingers searching busily. Occupation of any kind came as a boon.

Loder slowly followed him, and as the box was brought to light he leaned forward intently.

"As I told you, one is the copy of an old signet ring, the other a plain band—a plain gold band like a wedding ring." Chilcote laughed as he placed the four rings side by side on his palm. "I could think of nothing else that would be wide and not ostentatious. You know how I detest display."

Loder touched the rings. "You have good taste," he said. "Let's see if they serve their purpose." He picked them up and carried them to the lamp.

Chilcote followed him. "That was an ugly wound," he said, his curiosity reawakened as Loder extended his finger. "How did you come by it?"

The other smiled. "It's a memento."

"Oh, bravery?"

"No, quite the reverse." He looked again at his hand, then glanced back at Chilcote. "No," he repeated, with an unusual impulse of confidence. "It serves to remind me that I am not exempt—that I have been fooled like other men."

"That implies a woman?"

"Yes." Again Loder looked at the scar on his finger. "I seldom recall the thing. It's so absolutely past. But I rather want you to know that I've been through the fire. It's a sort of guarantee."

Chilcote made a hasty gesture, but the other interrupted it.

"Oh, I know you trust me. But you're giving me a risky post. I want you to see that women are out of my line—quite out of it."

"But, my dear chap—"

Loder went on without heeding. "This thing happened eight years ago at Santasalar," he said, "a little place between Luna and Pistoria—a mere handful of houses wedged between two hills; a regular relic of old Italy crumbling away under flowers and sunshine, with nothing to suggest the present century except the occasional passing of a train round the base of one of the hills. I had literally stumbled upon the place on a long tramp south from Switzerland and had been tempted into a stay at the little inn. The night after my arrival something unusual occurred. There was an accident to the train at the point where it skirted the village."

"There was a small excitement. All the inhabitants were anxious to help, and I took my share. As a matter of fact, the smash was not disastrous; the passengers were hurt and frightened, but nobody was killed."

He paused and looked at his companion; but, seeing him interested, went on.

"Among these passengers was an English lady. Of all concerned in the business, she was the least upset. When I came upon her she was sitting on the shattered door of one of the carriages calmly arranging her hat. On seeing me she looked up with the most charming smile imaginable."

"I have just been waiting for somebody like you," she said. "My stupid maid has got herself smashed up somewhere in the second class carriages, and I have nobody to help me find my dog."

"Of course, that first speech ought to have enlightened me, but it didn't. I only saw the smile and heard the voice. I knew nothing of whether they were deep or shallow. So I found the maid and found the dog. The first expressed gratitude, the other didn't. I extricated him with enormous difficulty from the wreck of the luggage van, and this was how he marked his appreciation."

He held out his hand and nodded toward the scar.

Chilcote glanced up. "So that's the explanation?"

"Yes. I tried to conceal the thing when I restored the dog, but I was bleeding abominably and I failed. Then the whole business was changed. It was I who needed seeing to, my new friend insisted; I who should be looked after and not she. She forgot the dog in the newer interest of my wounded finger. The maid, who was practically unburt, was sent on to engage rooms at the little inn, and she and I followed slowly."

"That walk impressed me. There was an attractive mistiness of atmosphere in the warm night, a sensation more than attractive in being made much of by a woman of one's own class and country after five years' wandering."

He laughed with a touch of irony.

"But I won't take up your time with details. You know the progress of an ordinary love affair. Throw in a few more flowers and a little more sunshine than is usual, a man who is practically a hermit and a woman who knows the world by heart and you have the whole thing."

"She insisted on staying in Santasalar for three days in order to keep my finger bandaged. She ended by staying three weeks in the hope of snatching up my life."

"On coming to the hotel she had given no name, and in our first explanations to each other she led me to conclude her an unmarried girl. It was at the end of the three weeks that I learned that she was not a free agent, as I had innocently imagined. But possessed a husband whom she had left ill with malaria at Florence or Rome."

"The news disconcerted me, and I took no pains to hide it. After that the end came abruptly. In her eyes I had become a fool with middle class principles; in my eyes—But there is no need for that. She left Santasalar the same night in a great confusion of trunks and hatboxes, and next morning I strapped on my knapsack and turned my face to the south."

"And women don't count ever after?"

Chilcote smiled, beguiled out of himself.

Loder laughed. "That's what I've been trying to convey. Once bitten, twice shy?" He laughed again and caught the two rings from his finger with an air of finality.

"Now, shall I start? This is the last—" of Chilcote's smiling cheek. "Well, I get to Santasalar where I am to find your house, go straight in, mount the stairs and there on my right hand will be the door of your—I mean my own—private room. I think I've got it by heart. I feel inspired. I feel that I can't go wrong." He handed the two remaining rings to Chilcote and picked up the overcoat.

"I'll stick on till I get a wire," he said. "Then I'll come back and we'll reverse again." He slipped on the coat and moved back toward the table. Now that the decisive moment had come it embarrassed him. Scarcely knowing how to bring it to an end, he held out his hand.

Chilcote took it, palling a little. "Will be all right?" he said, with a sudden return of nervousness. "I'll be all right. And I've made it plain about—the remuneration? A hundred a week, besides all expenses."

Loder smiled again. "My pay? Oh, yes, you've made it clear as day. Shall we say good night now?"

"Yes. Good night."

There was a strange, distant note in Chilcote's voice, but the other did not pretend to hear it. He pressed the hand he was holding, though the cold dampness of it repelled him.

"Good night," he said again.

"Good night."

They stood for a moment awkwardly looking at each other, then Loder quietly disengaged his hand, crossed the room and passed through the door.

Chilcote, left standing alone in the middle of the room, listened while the last sound of the other's footsteps was audible on the uncarpeted stairs. Then, with a furtive, hurried gesture, he caught up the green shaded lamp and passed into Loder's bedroom.

CHAPTER VIII.

TO all men come portentous moments, difficult moments, triumphant moments. Loder had had his examples of all three, but no moment in his career ever equaled in strangeness of sensation that in which, dressed in another man's clothes, he fitted the latchkey for the first time into the door of the other man's house.

The act was quietly done. The key fitted the lock smoothly, and his fingers turned it without hesitation, though his heart, usually extremely steady, beat sharply for a second. The hall loomed massive and somber, despite the modernity of electric lights. It was darkly and expensively decorated in black and brown; a frieze of wrought bronze, representing peacocks with outspread tails, ornamented the walls; the banisters were of heavy ironwork, and the somewhat formidable fireplace was of the same dark metal.

Loder looked about him, then advanced, his heart again beating quickly as his hand touched the cold banister and he began his ascent of the stairs. But at each step his confidence strengthened; his feet became more firm until, at the head of the stairs, as if to disprove his assurance, his pulses played him false once more, this time to a more serious tone. From the farther end of a well lighted corridor a maid was coming straight in his direction.

For one short second all things seemed to whiz about him; the certainty of detection overpowered his mind. The indisputable knowledge that he was John Loder and no other, despite all armor of effrontery and dress, so dominated him that all other considerations shrunk before it. It wanted but one word, one simple word of denunciation, and the whole scheme was shattered. In the dismay of the moment he almost wished that the word might be spoken and the suspense ended.

But the maid came on in silence, and so incredible was the silence that Loder moved onward too. He came within a yard of her, and still she did not speak. Then, as he passed her, she drew back, respectfully against the wall.

The strain, so astonishingly short, had been immense, but with its slackening came a strong reaction. The expected humiliation seethed suddenly to a desire to dare fate. Pausing quickly, he turned and called the woman back.

"The spot where he had halted was vividly bright, the ceiling light being Loder bore his scrutiny without flinching. Directly above his head, and as she came toward him he raised his face deliberately and waited.

She looked at him without surprise or interest. "Yes, sir?" she said.

"Is your mistress in?" he asked. He could think of no other question, but it served his purpose as a test of his voice.

Webster and His Tenant.

Daniel Webster once became the owner of some land in New Hampshire, with buildings thereon. He left the tenant who was there when the premises were conveyed to him in possession. One summer a few years later as he and his wife were journeying in the vicinity of the farm they decided to take a look at it. He found an aged woman in charge. She said in reply to questions that the place belonged to a lawyer down in Boston named Webster.

"What rent do you pay?" asked the amused owner.

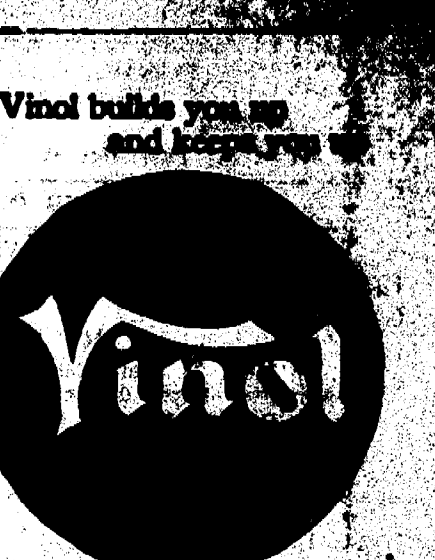

"Rent?" she exclaimed. "I don't pay any rent. It is bad enough to live here without having to pay for it, and if he don't fix up the house soon I'll leave anyhow. Wonder if he expects I'm going to freeze to death this cold weather?"

"Well," remarked the proprietor, "it is a pretty hard case, but if you'll accept this five dollar bill toward holding on another year I'll try to see Mr. Webster and have something done about it."

With which remark he took final leave of his farm.—Boston Herald.

An Organized Holdup.

An English Christmas isn't a saucer-fest; it's a begging-fest. The band plays, but it plays with one hand while the other is out for coin. The boys and men sing Christmas hymns and then take a collection, and the moon may be shining, but you can't see it through the fog. Some of the railway stations are decorated, and you've scarcely had time to remark that you think it's a very beautiful custom when an itching palm appears between you and the holly. The postman says, "Merry Christmas," and waits for you to be generous, and the lamplighter and the paper boy and the man who delivers groceries and the boy from the cake shop. Porters follow you wherever you go, and servants whom you never saw before hob up in numbers. And out in the street whenever you hear any one say "Merry Christmas" you mechanically put your hand in your pocket. It isn't Christmas; it's an organized holdup.—Boston Herald.

Gigantic Energy of America

By T. P. O'CONNOR, Member of Parliament
A GIGANTIC energy outside and INDEPENDENT OF MAN—that is my impression of the terrific city of New York. That is the impression I have of most of America.
When you get down to the offices in Wall street and the other business streets of New York you get the impression of deafening noise, of overwhelming and bewildering speed, and, in contrast with all this, of universal and BROODING SADNESS. You find not one but half a dozen lifts in a single building. They rush up and down at intervals of a few seconds. They have the ordinary elevator which stops at every floor, and then the express elevator, which rushes at a speed that almost makes your heart stop, up past twelve or twenty floors without a pause.
AND INSIDE THE ELEVATOR STANDS A MAN OR TWO, SELF ABSORBED, SILENT, BARELY ANSWERING A QUESTION, SUGGES-TIVE OF SOME VICTIM OF OMNIPOTENT AND RESISTLESS AND GLOOMY DESTINY.

TRYING TO REVIVE THE CORPSE.
The Age is in receipt of a communication from the board of simplified spelling, asking this newspaper to adopt the new phonetic style, that was taboed by congress recently and thus doubtless, to circumvent the senators and representatives by the power of the press. A list of the 300 simplified words is enclosed in the letter
"The Age must respectfully decline."
There is much that is good in the new form, but also much that is bad. It seems that the reformers have gone out of their way to get words to revamp when they might have made a hard and fast rule for the use of "cel" and "lie" etc., as "receive," "believe," etc. They have changed "plough" to "plow" but "bough" still remains "bough" and not "how." If one why not the other. What about cough? And dough? The old ordinary stumbling blocks are stumbling blocks still and the question remains for some reason to answer if "kiss" will ever be as popular—certainly not as long drawn-out—as "kissed."

JAMES HILL'S LOOK AHEAD

"Keep Boys on Farm," Advises
Great Railroad Builder.

BACK TO THE SOIL IS HIS CRY.

Urges Careful Cultivation of Every Acre as Preparation for Impending Day of Need — Declares Future Is Menaced by Rush From Farms to Cities—Asks "How Shall We Feed
the Millions?"

James J. Hill, president of the Great Northern railroad, in his recent address at the Minnesota State fair at Hamline, Minn., took a look ahead
which ought to be of interest to Americans, who of all peoples are perhaps most intent upon exploiting the present and least regardful of the future,
says the New York Tribune. Mr. Hill looks at that future by the light of statistics and careful deduction, and what he sees gives him sufficient uneasiness to sound a timely note of warning to us to mend our ways if we are to leave not to our remote posterity, but to the children of today, an unimpaired inheritance and a chance in the struggle for existence equal to that with which those now on the stage began their life work. Mr. Hill's speech in part follows:

Notwithstanding the addition of more than a million people a year from abroad, nearly all of them men and women who must work for a living, labor outside of the cities was never so scarce or wages
as high as at the present time. Immigration lingers in the great centers and adds
to the difficulties attending employment.
The farms attract out their hands, and railroads in making extensions
have to get help at the highest market price and find a large percentage of those whom they employ mere hoboos, who desert as soon as they have succeeded in obtaining transportation from one port of the country to another. Farmers beseech the employment agencies in vain and offer the lazy tramp a sum for a day's work
in the field unheard of in any other country in the world. The situation grows more embarrassing yearly. Hours of labor are being reduced in some of the states for farm as well as shop hands.
Men are scarcer as the movement of population to the cities grows more pronounced. A considerable portion of this year's magnificent crop will be either reduced in quality or altogether lost, because of the impossibility of getting labor to handle it properly. The country needs more workers on the soil. Not to turn the stranger away, but to direct him to the farm instead of the city, not to watch with fear a possible increase of the birth rate, but to use every means to keep the boys on the farm and to send youths from the city to swell the depleted
ranks of agricultural industry is the necessary task of a well advised political economy and an intelligent patriotism.
Within twenty years we must house
and employ in some fashion 50,000,000
of additional population, and by the middle of this century there will be approximately two and a half times as many people in the United States as there are today. No nation in history has ever confronted with a sterner problem than this certain prospect sets before us. What are we to do with our brother, whose keepers we are? How are we to provide for our children with shelter and food?
Our arable public lands have almost disappeared.
Our one resource, looking at humanity
as something more than the creature of a day, is the productivity of the soil. The reckless distribution of the public land, its division among all the greedy who come to ask for it, the appropriation of large areas for grazing, have absorbed much of the national heritage. Only one-half of the land in private ownership is now utilized. That tillage does not produce one-half of what the land might be made to yield without losing an atom of its fertility. Yet the waste of our treasure has proceeded so far that the actual value of the soil for productive purposes has already deteriorated more than it should have done in five centuries of use.

MRS. JAMES R. GARFIELD.
The next lady to enter the president's cabinet, socially speaking, will be Mrs. James Rudolph Garfield, whose husband is to succeed Mr. Hitchcock as secretary of the interior. Mrs. Garfield was Miss Helen Newell of Chicago.
Her father was president of the Lake Shore railroad. She became the wife of President Garfield's son in 1890. Mrs. Garfield is said to be very athletic, frequently taking walks of from eight to ten miles with her husband. She is also training her children to enjoy the benefits of outdoor life.

once the wheat yield was from twenty to thirty bushels an acre it is now from twelve to eighteen. Frankly and without shame this is attributed to the wearing out of the soil, as if the earth were a garment that must be destroyed by the wearing. If the earth the mother of humanity is to "wear out" what is to become of the race?
Certain it is that the time has come for setting our household in order and creating a serious study of national activity
and economy according to a truer insight
and more rational mood.
The first step is to realize our dependence upon the cultivation of the soil. The next will be to concentrate popular interest and invention and hope upon that neglected occupation. We are still clinging to the skirts of a civilization born of great cities. We at this moment use a slang which calls the stupid man "a farmer."
Genius has shunned the farm and expended itself upon mechanical appliances
and commerce and the manifold activities
whose favorable reactions have been back-wardly to the plot of ground upon which stands solidly the real master of himself and of his destiny. If we comprehend
our problem aright all this will change,
and a larger comprehension of agriculture as our main resource and our most dignified and independent occupation will
for the future direct to their just aim, in the improvement of methods and the increase of yield, the wisdom and the science and the willing labor of the millions who thus are to transmit to posterity an unimpaired inheritance.

Agriculture in the most intelligent meaning of the term is something almost unknown in the United States. We have a light scratching of the soil and the yield by the most rapidly evolving methods in manufactures we have come to consider small economies so carefully that the difference of a fraction of a cent in the utilization of a by product of something formerly considered to be waste makes the difference between a profit and a bankruptcy. In farming we are satisfied with a small yield at the expense of the most rapid soil deterioration.
When we have added to the rational expense the $50,000,000 a year the country
earns while the world is asking us to plaudits of the world. If a process for extracting metallic wealth from bricks were to be discovered tomorrow
such as to assure the country an added volume of $1,000,000,000 in wealth every year, the nation would think of nothing else. Yet these things would be but a trifle when compared with the possibilities of agricultural development in the United States. The official estimated value of all farm products of the country last year was $1,000,000,000. Discount this for loss to the nation of $15,000,000 in conditions
by 20 per cent and over $500,000,000 remains. It is also officially recorded that of the appropriated farm area of the United States a little less than one half is under cultivation. Utilize the other half and without a change of climate the method of output would be practically doubled. Change methods only a little—not to high class intensive farming, but to an agriculture as far advanced as that of those other countries which have made the most progress—and without any additional whatever to the existing cultivated area the product an acre would be doubled. We should be able by directing surplus population to the land and by the adoption of a system of culture in full operation elsewhere greatly to increase this minimum present yield of $500,000,000 per annum of farm products. That is, we may add $10,000,000,000 or $15,000,000,000 every year to the national wealth, or we may choose. And this is only a beginning.
We no more know what is the maximum food bearing capacity of the earth than we do the rate at which people may be able to travel a century from now.
But what has been done is sufficiently startling. A population of 45,000,000 people in Japan is supported on 15,000 cultivated square miles. It is the 1000 Products obtained from the sea. This is because cultivation in Japan is truly intensive—that is, it is no longer even highly developed farming, but market gardening is no approach that science the shelter of plants from frost and unfavorable elements and the treatment of grains and vegetables by separate planting and individual nurture, all limitations upon earth's bounty appear to recede. From 27 acres in the suburbs of Paris

there have been grown in a single season 250,000 pounds of vegetables. A market gardener of Paris declares that all food, animal and vegetable, required for the 3,500,000 persons of two great departments could be grown, by methods already in use on the 3,500 square miles of gardens surrounding the city.
It can be shown that an average of two persons or more may be supported on every acre of tillable land by the highest form of intensive farming. But dismissing this as unnecessary, it has been shown that a people like those of Belgium today, not an oriental race, accustomed to a standard of living and of labor inapplicable to us, not living in virtual serfdom, like that of Russia, but as industrious, fairly intelligent and exceedingly comfortable agricultural community, raised from the soil food enough for the needs of 490 persons to the square mile.
Adding provisionally that ratio as a point of departure, though the actual ratio of area to population gives a figure considerably higher even than this, the 41,158,477 acres of improved farm land in the United States on the date of the last official report in area materially enlarged by the present time would support in comfort 317,550,495 people, enabling them
at the same time to raise considerable food for export and to engage in necessary manufacturing employments. Applying the same ratio to the entire acreage
of tillable land within the United States, both improved and unimproved, which was at the same date 838,581,774 acres,
the population indicated as able to live with comfort and prosperity on the actually existing agricultural area of this country,
under an intelligent system, and a fairly competent but by no means highly complex method of culture, rises to 645,946,823.
The conclusion is that if not another ac-
cre were to be redeemed from the wilderness
if the soil were treated kindly and intelligently and if industry were distributed fairly and popular attention was concentrated upon the best possible utilization of the one unfailing national resource,
there would be produced all necessary
food for the wants of, in round numbers, 650,000,000 people.

Falling to understand the needs of the hour or to appreciate the moral to which we point what fortune must await us?
Within twenty years 125,000,000 people, and before the middle of the century over 200,000,000, must find room and food and employment within the United States.
Where are they to live? What are they to do? By that time our mineral resources will have been so nearly exhausted that the industries related to them must fall into a minor place. By that time it is apparent that our dream of conquest of world markets will be a burst bubble.
Let us be warned in time. On every side there is menace if our national activity be not reorganized on the basis of the old fashioned common sense of the safety valve for older peoples has been found in emigration. Their very relief has contributed to our danger. The United States cannot follow their example.
Their conclusion reached points out and emphasizes a national duty so immense and so imperative that it should take precedence of all else. It is the foe that has overthrown civilizations as proud as prosperous and far more strongly fortified than our own. Nothing can stop the onward march of nature's laws or close the iron jaws of her necessities when they open to crush their victims.
If we are to walk safely in the way of wisdom there is much to be done. It is time to begin. There must be first a return to conservative and economic methods, a readjustment of national ideas such as to place agriculture and its claims to the best intelligence and the highest skill that the country affords in the very forefront. There must be a national revolt against the worship of manufacture and trade as the only forms of progressive activity and the false notion that wealth built upon these at the sacrifice of the fundamental form of wealth production can endure. A clear recognition on the part of the whole people, from the highest to the lowest, that the tillage
of the soil is the natural and most desirable occupation for man, to which every other is subsidiary and to which all else
must in the end yield, is the first requisite. With public interest firmly fixed upon the future of the country, in more self preservation we must give serious attention to the practical occupation of restoring agriculture to its due place in the nation.

Brownsville Row in House.
Washington, Jan. 9.—An echo of the Brownsville assault by negro soldiers of the Twenty-fifth Infantry was heard in the house. Representative Slayden of Texas, told anew, and with considerable detail, the story of that August night of last year when the colored troops as alleged "shot up" the town of Brownsville in his state. Mr. Slayden devoted much time to a careful analysis of the conditions of the white and black races, and said that race prejudice was at the bottom of the assault. In declaring the negro race to be unfit for American soldiers, the Texas congressman said he had in view only the circumstances of their service. He did not impeach their physical courage.

Are you to be buried in a foot under ground? But many times women call on their family physicians, suffering, as they imagine, one from dyspepsia, another from heart disease, another from liver or kidney disease, another from nervous prostration, another with pain here and there, and in this way they present alike to themselves and their easy-going or over-busy doctor, separate diseases, for which he, assuming them to be such, prescribes his pills and potions. In reality, they are all only symptoms caused by some uterine disease. The physician, ignorant of the cause of suffering, keeps up his treatment until large bills are made. The suffering patient gets no better, by reason of the wrong treatment, but probably worse. A proper medicine, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, directed to the cause would have entirely removed the disease, thereby dispelling all those distressing symptoms, and instituting comfort instead of prolonged misery. It has been well said, that "a disease known is half cured."

Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is a scientific medicine, carefully devised by an experienced and skillful physician, and adapted to woman's delicate system. It is made of native American medicinal roots and is perfectly harmless in its effects in any condition of the female system.

As a powerful invigorating tonic "Favorite Prescription" imparts strength to the whole system and to the organs distinctly feminine in particular. For overworked, "worn-out," run-down, debilitated teachers, milliners, dressmakers, seamstresses, shop-girls, house-keepers, nursing mothers, and feeble women generally, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is the greatest earthly boon, being unequalled as an appetizing cordial and restorative tonic.

As a soothing and strengthening nerve tonic, "Favorite Prescription" is unequalled and is invaluable in allaying and subduing nervous excitability, irritability, nervous exhaustion, nervous prostration, neuralgia, hysteria, vertigo, St. Vitus's dance, and other distressing, nervous symptoms commonly attendant upon functional and organic disease of the uterus. It induces refreshing sleep and relieves mental anxiety and despondency. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets invigorate the stomach, liver and bowels. One to three a dose. Easy to take as candy.

REPLIES TO HIS CRITIC

Editor AGO—Will you please announce that the subject for my sermon next Sunday evening at the Christian Union church will be, "Truth and Justice," suggested by our criticising friends, with the additional word "Mercy," or "Weighed in God's Scales." In connection with this subject we will amplify our remarks of last Sunday evening and give additional facts that led us to our conclusions, for the benefit of those who were not present last Sunday evening and for the benefit of our complaining friend. All are cordially invited to be present and hear the facts and arguments, and from the same form their own conclusions.

I desire to thank The Age for giving space for a partial report of my sermon, and also to the many good people of Coshocton, who have expressed to us their kindly commendation of the same; also to those who have criticised us. Respectfully,

A PLOT TO KILL WHITE OFFICERS

Reported to Have Been Discovered at Fort Reno, Oklahoma.

ANXIETY AMONG ARMY CHIEFS

Alleged Conspiracy Develops at the Hearing of the Colored Corporal, Charged With Assault on Captain Macklin—Arrests of Discharged Negro Soldiers Anticipated.

El Reno, Okla., Jan. 9.—At the preliminary hearing of Corporal Knowles, colored, charged with shooting Captain Edgar A. Macklin of Company C, Twenty-fifth Infantry, it was developed that there was a plot to murder every white officer at this post.

It is known that nearly every negro at the post entertains a personal grudge against Captain Macklin and other white officers as a result of the affair at Brownsville, Tex., and the discharge of the negro battalion that followed.

All of the officers now go heavily armed and protected throughout the night. Every effort has been made by the officers at the post to keep the alleged conspiracy a secret, but it is learned that an investigation is now being conducted at several army posts and important places throughout the country, and within a short time several arrests of the members of the troop recently discharged in disgrace are expected to follow.

Information was received here that the arrest of a negro soldier has been made at Lajonia, Colo. Suspicion rests upon negro soldiers at Fort Niobrara, Neb., and at three other points. The arrests of these men had been postponed until the hearing in the case of Corporal Knowles was concluded at Fort Reno, when it was hoped that some further information would be secured tending to incriminate other persons in this alleged conspiracy. Knowles was held to the grand jury.

Air Ship Men Meet.
There will be a meeting of the Coshocton Aerial Navigation company at the Eureka laundry this evening to further consider the purchase of a gas bag. William Wilson, who is constructing the frame work of the airship, is working every day on it and hopes to have it completed in six or seven weeks.

Uhrichsville, O., Jan. 9.—Simon Sindlinger, aged 60, a well to do farmer, three miles west of here, shot and killed his wife as she lay sleeping in bed. He has suffered from a hallucination that enemies are trying to drive him away from his home, but was not considered dangerous. A Pastor's Statement.

Rev. P. W. Drumm, formerly pastor at Euclid Ave., M. E. church, Zanesville, Ohio, says: "That he suffered for two years from Diabetes, indigestion and stomach troubles, and several attacks of kidney colic that operated had to be given to relieve the pain, general health was giving away. After friends insisted I commenced to take Dr. Jackson's Digestive and Liver Powders and I can now say that during the past two years all the former symptoms have gone and I am as a healthy man as can be found. To show my appreciation of what Dr. Jackson's Remedies did for me, I have sent scores of friends to him for treatment and recommended it to all."

Rev. Drumm's whole trouble originated from indigestion, as does 85 per cent of all human ills, we cure because we go to the seat of the trouble and start to work. First dose relieves, a trial will convince you.

Students Dismissed.

Lexington, Va., Jan. 9.—Seventy-two members of the third class, who took part in the fireworks escapade Saturday night at the Virginia military institute, were dismissed by a special order, but execution of the order was suspended pending a meeting of the board of visitors soon to be held here. The cadets can then appeal to the board to reinstate them or take other action.

THE LATEST CREATIONS of THE PARIS MILLINERS

PARIS, Nov. 3.—If you have a large bank account and a small sense of the ridiculous you will come off winner in a hat hunting expedition this season. I know it's rank heresy to speak of the Puritan chaplain as anything save chic, but the truth is that I am just home dead, tired out and disgusted from an inspection of the creations, chef d'oeuvres, masterpieces, what you will, of the most famous millinery artists this gay capital boasts. And the sight has not been an alluring one. At the present moment, my frame of mind is very much that of the Irishman who said, "Between the goodness of the bad people and the badness of the good ones, I'm glad it's not myself that'll be after separating the hats between the goodness of their shape and the badness of their trimming. It is hard indeed to separate the 'shape from the goats.'"

The lines in the best models are delightful, and the possibilities of fitting them becomingly to the individual is fascinating, but the trimming's the thing that plays such tricks before high heaven as to make the angels weep. Why, I saw a hat at Carlier's that would have been a dream of loveliness but—well, it was a round turban affair carried out in draped red velvet of a lovely ruby tone. The frame was pinched up in front with a tight knot and buckle, supporting a stiff, high bow. The artist marred what was well by placing at eccentric angles two long comet fashion aigrets that shot out like bird of fashion over each ear. The effect was monstrous and proved another illustration of good people and bad devils squabbling for supremacy.

I heard some one say the other day—a man, by the way, it was—that a pretty woman could wear anything and look pretty. This is a mighty "taking" doctrine, but try the above described turban on the head of the "pretty lady" and see how the theory works in practice. Do you remember Glad, the little ragamuffin philosopher in Mrs. Burnett's "The Dawn of Tomorrow," and her sunny maxim, "If things ain't cheerful, people's got to be?" Now this season if hats aren't pretty, people have got to be made to look pretty in them. But as you value your beauty I beg of you not to become utterly exhausted and purchase a hat because the pretty milliner's assistant looks well in it. This has been the cause of so many women looking as if they had shown their teeth bludgeoned.

One woman confessed her line to me

by saying penitently, "I did think the queer looking piece of headgear would be a fright on me, but when that attractive milliner girl stuck it on her fluffy pompadour and said it was just as becoming to me as it was to her—for I too had lots of hair—why I was foolish enough to have the thing sent home."

To get back again to our subject, the new millinery, it seems to be modeled this year for youthful faces and luxuriant tresses, and the outlook would be distinctly dreary for the woman who cannot lay claim to either asset even though one have it not, and to meet the hiatus that often occurs between hat and hair the smart atelier carries a supply of false hair and other little coiffure aids. After a hat has been selected as a possible purchase, madame takes her client into another room and gives her a lesson upon the art of adjusting the new possession.

But in the matter of coiffure there is one essential detail in which the mode is arbitrary this winter, that of waving the hair. It is not good form to be so palpably Marcelled as to suggest thoughts of the curling iron to the beholder. But one must display a wealth of softly waving locks this season or be considered hopelessly out of date. And still another hint. Side combs are out of date, but smart high combs of Spanish or empire design are worn in the back of the head. They serve the double purpose of pretty ornaments and supports for the hat.

Not many of the hats this season are ordered to match the gown, and the all black affair has returned to favor. To be worn with all kind of costumes. It will serve as a theater hat and is really a most economical piece of headgear, though at the start it is apt to be rather expensive, for a black creation to be successful must be built of the best materials. This hat goes with all kinds of afternoon frocks, and when on the picture order it has a festive air worn on those occasional times of gaiety that come into the lives of even the most puritanical women. Rivaling the all black hat is the model done in tones of brown. This is considered "good" with almost every gown except a black one, unless the browns in the hat are of peculiarly bright, copper tones. With a rather large black hat in one's possession and a small touque or turban matching the street suit she is ready for almost any emergency demanding a head covering. Of course the smart woman buys her hats by the score and includes in the purchase especial little "opera" head-dresses, which this winter are a novelty.

SMART MODELS FROM THE RUE DE LA PAIX.

ely. One very attractive "affair" is made on a bandeau of black velvet, or rather, two bandeaux, one that fits the head perfectly and another encircling the knot of hair when it is fixed back on the head. At one side is a menne white osprey. Bows of velvet are pressed into service for the open headpieces, mingled with sprays of madras-like fern. Still another variety is that of a large black velvet hat with a wide brim and a high crown.

To match the handsome lace trimmings, there are hats with lace veils, and other hats with lace veils, and other hats with lace veils.

... Labor Notes ...

Union and Nonunion Men Clash. Eureka, Cal., Jan. 9.—In a battle between union and nonunion longshoremen one nonunion man was killed, one fatally shot and one union man probably fatally shot.

Printers Want More Wages. Norfolk, Va., Jan. 9.—Union printers of Norfolk demand an increase of $3.50 per week in their wage scale. Job printers, newspaper hand typesetters, machine men, foremen, floormen and machinists are included in the demand for an increase, which is to date from March 26.

Labor Assembly Dissolved. Columbus, O., Jan. 9.—The charter of the Columbus Trades and Labor assembly has finally been revoked by the executive council of the American Federation of Labor, according to a telegram received from Frank Morrison, national secretary. The principal reasons for the taking of the charter are probably the action of the assembly last Saturday night in sustaining the brewery workers in their contention with the Washington Brewing company, in refusing to unseat Local No. 80 of the Brewery Workers' union as directed by the secretary of the American Federation, and also the alleged Socialistic tendencies of the assembly as now constituted.

Condemn Roosevelt's Attitude. Stockton, Cal., Jan. 9.—The convention of the American Federation of Labor unanimously adopted resolutions condemning the attitude of President Roosevelt on the Japanese question, and denouncing the proposed employment of Chinese coolies on the Panama canal.

Oppose Chinese Labor. New York, Jan. 9.—Senator Flint, Representative McKinley, Smith and other congressmen are back from Panama. Senator Flint said: "I found everything in excellent shape and work progressing very favorably on most economical lines. You may say that I am emphatically of the opinion that there is absolutely no necessity for the employment of Chinese labor in completing the canal." Congressman McKinley, telling of his impressions, said: "I am satisfied that there is not the slightest necessity for the employment of Chinese on the work. The canal zone is getting very healthy and it seems to me to present a fine field for American workmen without employing Chinese." Congressman Dickson said he was opposed to the employment of Chinese labor on the canal. He said also that the men now there are decisively against the proposal to introduce Chinese labor.

Outraged by Negro. Lynchburg, Va., Jan. 9.—Miss Gladys Shelton, 17, daughter of a well-to-do farmer near Monroe, Amherst county, was outraged by a negro. The negro then took the girl to a creek to drown her. He changed his mind and made her go to a neighbor's home, while he went in another direction. Five negroes were arrested and brought here, a mob of 75 men chasing Sheriff Beard and a deputy for two miles. The girl's condition is precarious, but she will recover.

Five Drown. Portland, Ore., Jan. 9.—Five men are believed to have been drowned in the Columbia river near Butlers, Wash., by the capsizing of a boat. Persons on shore heard the men shout for help and a search was made, but no trace of the boat was found. The missing: W. E. Murray, county surveyor of Clatsop county; Carl Lindstrom, William Wallace, Mr. Jackson of Stevenson, Wash., and an unknown man.

CATARRH A UNIVERSAL BLOOD DISEASE

Catarrh is usually worse in Winter, because of the cold, damp and suddenly changing climate. Colds are contracted, and neglected and as the secretions from the different inflamed membranes are absorbed into the blood the unpleasant symptoms of the disease commence. The nostrils are stopped up and a constant dropping of mucous back into the throat keeps up a continual hacking and spitting. The patient has dull headaches, ringing noises in the ears, and often slight fever and a depressed, half-sick feeling accompanies the disease. The blood becomes so fully charged with catarrhal matter that stomach troubles are brought on, the kidneys and bladder are affected, and if the blood is not purified of the poison the lungs become diseased because of the constant passage of impure blood through them. Catarrh cannot be cured with washes, sprays, inhalations and such treatment; these cannot reach the poison-laden blood where the real cause is located, and can only give temporary relief and comfort. A disease which affects the entire blood supply as does Catarrh, must be treated with a blood purifier. S. S. S. is the best remedy for Catarrh, which has grown to be a universal disease. It goes to the bottom of the trouble, rids the blood of the catarrhal matter, reinvigorates the circulation, and cures this disgusting disease permanently. When S. S. S. has purified the blood every part of the system receives a supply of fresh, healthy blood; then the inflamed membranes heal and every symptom of Catarrh passes away. Write for our book containing information about Catarrh, and ask for any medical advice you desire. No charge is made for either.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

In Use For Over 30 Years.

THE CASTORIA COMPANY, 77 MURRAY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

The afternoon models are all elaborately adorned with feathers, paradise plumes, drooping aigrets and marvelously fine marabou feathers and flowers. They are carried out in velvet, or a fine felt of a suede finish is wonderfully effective, and there are lovely hats of tulle.

A theater hat is an important item in the Parisian wardrobe, and a high or semihigh necked evening frock is in constant demand in continental life. Abroad there are hundreds of occasions when one wants to be particularly smart, but to appear in a décolleté would be in bad taste. Only Frenchmen who have been to the best French restaurants, to Nice, and Biarritz, can grasp the possibility of combining elegance with a hat and a non-low necked gown. I use the latter term advisedly, as high necked does not exactly describe the majority of elaborate dresses which are worn at smart Paris theaters and at the casinos of Monte Carlo and other fashionable foreign resorts. The petit décolleté has been in vogue lately for these occasions, and those to whom this style is not becoming including the thin woman—wear transparent yokes of lace or sequined tulle.

Some women fall back on the so called dressy blouse when they dare not appear décolleté. Now of all the sartorial sins this is the worst one can commit under circumstances outside of a pension or quiet hotel. In smart restaurants here, on the Riviera and in Rome a blouse, however dressy—a word which often means overdressed—looks ridiculous. Better almost wear a tailor made.

Pardon the digression from the hat question, but this matter of evening dress abroad is such a mistaken one that to prospective visitors to the Ville Luminière it may be of interest. But, to return to our muttons, second empire effects are seen in the Impérial, a shape made famous by the Empress Eugénie. This hat is moderately large, dips well over the forehead and rolls abruptly at the sides, but takes another incline in the back, trimming on a beautiful model made for a celebrated actress was a single pink rose as big as a cabbage placed directly in front, holding a huge ostrich feather, which was arranged Knight Templar style over the crown. I don't know whether in the days of the second empire women were called, but the milliner must have been a merry thing.

The meeting of the representatives from the cities to compose the new Central Ohio baseball league, will probably be called to order one week from Friday, on January 18. The meeting will be held in Dennison and all the cities wanting in the league will have delegates there. The new league is rapidly growing into life-like form, and the meeting will start it on its no doubt, successful future. The final arrangements are being made and all the delegates notified of the time and place of the meeting, and everything will be in readiness by the 18th.

Admitted Outlaw League.

New York, Jan. 9.—The National Association of Baseball Leagues, which includes the minor leagues, adopted a resolution at its annual meeting here admitting the "outlaw" Tristate league to membership as a Class B organization. This was in consonance with the action of the national baseball commission at Cincinnati on Monday last, when it was decided to recognize the Tristate league.

In Fast Company.

"Bo" Ross who played with Ashland last season and will probably play there again this season, may go to Terre Haute, Ind. He has secured a position with them through William Robertson the latter part of last season, and if the Terre Haute manager wishes, he can hold Ross.

Will Play 154 Games.

Cincinnati, O., Jan. 9.—The joint schedule committee of the National and American baseball leagues met here and unanimously decided that the season of each league should consist of 154 games for each team. Both leagues will open on April 11 and close on Oct. 5 in the east and Oct. 6 in the west.

COMPROMISE

Reached Between Friends of Senators Foraker and Lodge.

Washington, Jan. 9.—Senate leaders of both parties made an effort to bring about harmony between opposing views concerning the proposed investigation of the affair at Brownsville, Tex., and what amounts to an agreement between Senators Foraker and Lodge has been attained by their friends. The compromise is not greatly different from the resolution presented by Senator Lodge and a similar one which Senator Foraker had intended to offer as a substitute for his original resolution. It provides for the investigation by the senate committee on military affairs of the affair at Brownsville, and to this is to be added provisions that a subcommittee be sent to Brownsville and that the expense of the investigation be paid out of the contingent fund of the senate. Such a resolution would ignore the constitutional and legal questions that have been debated for several days in the senate. Senator Lodge declares that he is satisfied with the program, and Senator Foraker says he is not particular about phraseology so long as an investigation is ordered and a committee sent to Brownsville to take testimony.

GREAT FLOOD

Appears Imminent in the Ohio Valley. Distress Reported.

Evansville, Ind., Jan. 9.—The biggest flood in the history of the Ohio valley is now almost a certainty. With the river here five feet over the danger line, excessive rains have fallen along the valley. "The great flood of 1884 will not be a circumstance to the one which now seems imminent," said Government Weather Observer Al Brand when he received dispatches telling of the general and heavy rains all over the Ohio valley the last 24 hours. Added to the steady rainfall is the increasingly cold weather. Distress and suffering over the flooded districts is now in an acute stage. Three of the steamboat lines are now out of from landing at smaller points because the landings are all deep under water.

Handsome Gift From Judge Smyser

Congressman Smyser has just presented to the public library a set of the "International Law Digest" which is unquestionably one of the best contributions that has been made to the public library in recent years. During President's Cleveland's administration, congress made an appropriation providing for the work, but the active work was not begun until after John Sherman became Secretary of State under McKinley's administration. It was he who called to this service Dr. John Bassett Moore, of Columbia university, and the new work just published, in seven volumes, is the result of those efforts. It is a history of all the international relations in which our country has had a place. It makes a complete history of international law as practiced or defended by our state department. The treatise is of extraordinary interest to the general reader as well as to student of American history, and a very limited edition has been placed at the disposal of Secretary Root, and it was through him that Congressman Smyser obtained the set for Coshockton. The library people appreciate very much this contribution made by Congressman Smyser.

GAME WARDEN SYSTEM GIVEN A HARD RAP

[By Telegraph to The Age]
Columbus, O., Jan. 9.—"The present game warden system is a disgrace to the state," declares the state fish and game commission in its annual report filed with the governor. "It is impossible to remedy it," the report continues, "owing to the lack of funds at the disposal of the commission. Not being able to hire wardens and pay their legitimate expenses, the commission is compelled to appoint wardens in different localities whose only recompense is the fines assessed against violators whom they arrest and convict." The commission recommends that a law be enacted requiring each hunter to pay a license fee of $1. The commission declares that as a result of the inefficient system for the protection of game it has been practically exterminated in Ohio.

100 WITNESSES BEFORE JURY

The Dr. Goodhart case was finished today and two cases, one from Isleta and one from West Lafayette are said to be the next in order, both being cases where cuttin gis charged.
